Ultrafast Physical Processes in Semiconductors

Exciton radiative lifetime in transition metal dichalcogenide monolayers. The longitudinal optical phonon modulates the dynamic absorption spectrum both in energy and linewidth.

Ultrafast Physical Processes in Semiconductors, Volume 67

Here the authors report expts.

The ultrafast onset of exciton formation in 2D semiconductors

Finally, the last line of Eq. Pulses of 100 fs with a wavelength of 266 nm realized a spatial resolution better than 100 nm. We examine how the efficiency of plasmon-induced hot electron transfer depends on the Au particle size in Au-tipped CdS nanorods.

Ultrafast Auger process in few

Here, we report simultaneous H₂ and O₂ evolution by CdS nanorods decorated with nanoparticulate redn. This second edition presents the most striking recent advances in the techniques of ultrashort pulse generation and ultrafast spectroscopy; it discusses the physics of relaxation, tunneling and transport dynamics in semiconductors and semiconductor nanostructures following excitation by femtosecond laser pulses. A robust, stable and very compact fiber chirped pulse amplifier was also developed in the 2000s, which facilitated the application of this research.
