impossible. Mayors of Warsaw, Budapest seek direct line with Brussels In response to the veto of the EU budget by the Polish and Hungarian governments last week, the mayors of Warsaw and Budapest, both from opposition parties, have started work on building a direct line with Brussels as a way to create opportunities for local governments to get funds even if the budget deal continues to be blocked for longer. Amidst the European migrant crisis, the country angered many of its neighbours by building a wall on its borders.

Hyperaccountability: Economic voting in Central and Eastern Europe

It is the first book length study of economic voting outside of established democracies, as well as one of the few comparative studies of voting in post-communist countries generally.

The EU and United States Must Refocus on Central and Eastern Europe after Coronavirus Democracy Threats

Hungary condemns new law, saying it discriminates against Slovakia's Hungarian minority. As the program enters its third decade, we want to build on their success by working together with our European partners to extend the benefits of the State Partnership Program to additional countries in Africa, the Asia-Pacific, and elsewhere. Promoting Democracy and the Rule of Law The United States and its partners in Central and Eastern Europe are dedicated to promoting democracy and the rule of law, both within and outside the region.
