As a consequence, the 2d Brigade was thrown into the attack a day earlier than the original schedule with three battalions 3 moving into two new areas south and west of our earlier landing zones. An air cavalry division can operate in and around the scattered monsoon storms and cope with the occasional heavy cloudbursts far better than it can operate in extremely low ceilings and fog. Partly in response to the Luftwaffe's demand for more forced laborers to increase fighter production, the concentration camp more than doubled between mid-1943 224,000 and mid-1944 524,000.
