Genoese currency, or four Sicilian ounces, secured by twenty pieces of fustian? Cambridge: Mediaeval Academy of America. The Genoese also maintained colonies in the Black Sea Caffè, Cembalo, Soldaia, Arushta, etc.

The shape of the world system in the thirteenth century

Most likely, this anomaly is due to the fact that trade and political relations between Genoa and the Byzantine Empire were still uncertain. It was even possible to cancel a first exchange transaction by re-exchange in the opposite direction, as it is possible today to convert dollars into English pounds and then to reconvert those pounds into dollars.

Not to be outdone, the Italians then created the collection Documenti e studi per la storia del commercio e del diritto commerciale italiano under the editorship of Federico Patetta and Mario Chiaudano. Medieval Prosopography was founded in 1980 when methodologies of social science were combined with social history in an attempt to explore and explicate the lives of people who, when treated as individuals, often remain obscure. This was followed by German attempts at colonization in what is now called Eastern Europe, circa the 18th century see Jan M. In any case, the exchange contract might serve the purpose either of transferring funds or of granting credit. The amount of the loan, 6 pounds Genoese, is modest, which suggests that Beltrano Bertoldus made personal loans to small people who had no security to offer but whom he could exploit.

Its date is June 8, 1156, and it relates to a loan of 115 pounds Genoese in exchange for which a company of merchants, acting jointly, promised to pay 460 perpers one month after reaching safely the court of the Byzantine Emperor, either in Constantinople or wherever he would be holding court. The cartulary of the notary Lanfranco contains a similar contract, dated September 18, 1210, involving a cctmbium maritimum of only 8 pounds 8 sol.

Paris: Presses Universitaires de France. The notarial records by their very nature give little information about the state of the money market, although such an organization was emerging in important trading centers, such as Genoa, Marseilles, and Siena, and at the fairs of Champagne. Society, and Government In Medieval Italy 18X? If the debtors did not visit the court, they would still owe 500 perpers and promised to pay them before All Saints November 1, 1156, presumably in Constantinople.
