The Foundation Of All Beliefs

I have lived many years with your before it. But I do think one can be persuaded, but resist that persuasion even though the preponderance of the evidence is undeniable. The task here is to consider the relationship of the will to belief formation.

The Formation of Belief

Beliefs are like cakes, they require several ingredients, combined under several different processes mixing, heating, kneading, etc.

The foundations of Satanic belief

So, in the discussion here, that is a given and must be remembered throughout the discussion. In this case, the Christian must seek some common ground by which a meaningful discussion can begin.

Similarly you have to realize that most things will only feel true within the context of social relationships, and that something could feel true only because a relationship validates it, even when actually false. If one is persuaded that something is true, which previously he held to be false, this brings that person to a point of crisis in his life, That is, will he act on that of which he is persuaded, or will he resist acting on the persuasion? Second, it is possible that a person accepts the facts but rejects the interpretation of the facts.

The Foundations of Religion, by Fred Foldvary, Ph.D.

Bringing together communities of faith allows us to find both the commonalities and the differences that exist between individuals and groups. There is in human beings a deep desire to be in psychological intimacy and connectedness with others, and religion provides that bond more so than profane interests.

A belief about reality is not reality itself. The essential concept of religion, said Durkheim, was not a belief in a God or gods, but a distinction between the sacred and the profane.

Our Beliefs

Is there really a reason to accept the emotional system you have gotten by no consideration or examination of your own? Once this happens, our mental disposition now includes what we call a belief. You may ask me for proof. The reasoning will no longer go any further and you will have arrived at the real foundation of your beliefs: emotion.

The Foundation Of All Beliefs

Furthermore, each person may require different levels of information or evidence. Anything about the kingdom of God was permitted into his mental processes because it was important to him even if he had misbeliefs about how one entered the Kingdom of God. In that are signs for people who reason.
