Hunting and Sacrifice in Swinburne's Atalanta in Calydon and Erechtheus

The ekkyklēma was a stage mechanism consisting of a low platform rolled on wheels or revolved on an axis on the skênē, or pushed on stage to symbolise a palace. I crawled out of bed on the Sunday a good while after midday, cursing the temporal limitations of hotel check-out but discovering to my joy that the Britannia had allowed for the laziness of wasters such as me and extended check-out, bless them.
