The Unsettled Relationship

Todaro have developed a new model of economic development which is relevant for labour surplus countries like India. As more people cross borders to work in the coming years, fair and effective migration policies that protect the rights of migrant workers and reduce the costs of labour migration will be essential for achieving economic growth and enhancing development outcomes for migrant workers and their families, and for countries of origin and destination. The model has focused on migration of labour from rural to urban areas induced by certain incentives.
