Juvenile Offenders and Victims: 2014 National Report

According to the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, in 2011 there were a total of 1,236,200 cases handled by the juvenile courts. Another set of critics charged the court with being too lenient on young offenders.

Juvenile Offenders And The Juvenile Justice System

If the probation officer does not recommend a petition, the officer can dismiss the charges, place the child on informal probation, or refer the child to a community agency. In the 1960s, many states revised their delinquency laws to move status offenders and nonoffenders into new nondelinquent categories, such as Persons, Children, or Minors in Need of Supervision referred to as PINS, CHINS, and MINS. Evaluations of after-care programs are summarized in.

Juvenile Justice System Improvement Project

YSC is operated by DYRS as the District of Columbia's secure juvenile detention center, which was opened in 2004. About half of the states grant judges the power to sentence youth to an indefinite period of confinement lasting until the youth reaches majority age. The statutory criteria that activate presumptive waiver cases fall into three broad categories Griffin et al.

Juvenile Crime

School-Justice Partnerships and Diversion Pathways Postponed TBA The School-Justice Partnerships and Diversion Pathways Certificate Program is designed to provide school and district staff, court professionals, law enforcement, and other child-serving community leaders with the knowledge and understanding necessary to address the immediate and long term needs of students known to, or at risk of entering, the juvenile justice system. An ongoing program analysis seeks to understand how the achievements of ChalleNGe graduates compare to similar youth who do not participate in the program. The Arkansas Democrat-Gazette reported in June 1998 that boys in the Central Arkansas Observation and Assessment Center seldom saw daylight, were given clean clothing only every other week, and were subjected to the unsanitary condition of raw sewage backing up into shower drains whenever toilets were flushed Coalition for Juvenile Justice, 1999.
