TUC response to Department of Work and Pensions consultation on in

The TUC even held a one-day conference on equal pay in November 1968. Public Sector and Strategic Projects 4.

Leitch Review of Skills

The League under the leadership of Emma Paterson fostered the growth of separate associations of women working in such trades as dressmaking, millinery and upholstery. It should also review the situation of part-time and shift workers in relation to access to Apprenticeships. However it is important that the NAS is resourced well enough to conduct its duties effectively.

National Education Association

The response of the male tailors was to argue that women should not be allowed to work in the trade. But for the work of the NFWW, such women would have been ignored even by the more revolutionary syndicalists. We welcome moves to create closer links between programme-led approaches and progression to an employed Apprenticeship.

TUC response to Department of Work and Pensions consultation on in

After thorough debates and negotiations on various issues raised by all parties, the following resolutions were reached and mutually adopted: A. The TUC would also argue that this should also be extended beyond the very large projects and be implemented fully through the procurement process for the whole of the public sector. However, the financial incentives for progression whether that takes the form of additional hours or higher hourly pay are in fact not strong at all.
