A decade later and still no answers: What happened to the Skelton brothers?

The garland in question was worked for him in silks, gold and pearls by the ladies of the Countess of Surrey at Sheriff Hutton Castle, where he was the guest of the duke of Norfolk. Strike the hogs with a club, They have drunk up my swilling-tub! His birth was cited, in The Garland of Laurel, as May 2, 1463, however, we have no records of this.

Very few of Skelton's productions are dated, and their titles are here necessarily abbreviated. He had already in his Boke of the Thre Foles drawn on Alexander Barclay's version of the Narrenschijf of Sebastian Brant, and this more elaborate and imaginative poem belongs to the same class. A Michigan Department of Corrections spokesperson told the Toledo Blade that Skelton was determined to pose a threat to the public.
