However, this cliché may also be used when talking about someone who has many lovers.

Cliché

Out of the park Knock or hit one out of the park is just one of the many sports-related clichés we use to motivate or praise people. Most commonly, cliché is used to refer to an expression or phrase that has been overused, especially to the point that it has lost its impact; think outside the box, actions speak louder than words, for all intents and purposes—these are all expressions that are clichés. Who knew Shakespeare coined many of the phrases we use today? However, bringing honesty into it implies that being is a problem.
