An end to the war in Afghanistan is integral to connectivity between the Central Asian Republics CARs and Pakistan. In a recent interview to Defense Journal the Chief of the Air Staff PAF has rightly stated that, Importance of air power is fully recognized by all countries.

an overview of pakistan's foreign policy 1947

Bureaucratic Politics Model in making foreign policy decisions. Any hasty withdrawal, Pakistan fears, could leave a security vacuum, throwing the country into a new wave of uncertainty. There was more interaction between the two states in the 1980s than was the case in the past which kept their difference and problem within manageable limits.

CPEC's Threat Matrix

The resulting political instability could further bring Pakistan closer to being placed on the FATF black-list.

Foreign policy challenges and opportunities for Pakistan

Draconian laws such as the Armed Forces special protection Act AFSPA are still enforced in the region despite there being a plethora of international calls for its elimination. Most other states supported this effort. Muslim World and Pakistan Pakistan maintained cordial interaction with the Muslim states, especially those located in the Gulf region.
